

The New York Times

NEW YORK , FRIDAY, MAY 26, 1989

Reviews/Art

Stanford Brent

*Ingber Gallery
415 West Broadway (near Spring
Street)
Through tomorrow*

Along with artists well known and well liked — Sheila Isham and Judith Rothschild — is a relative newcomer, Stanford Brent. Like just about every other artist, he is crazy about Italy. Unlike many others, he sometimes knows when to make a little go a long way. Paintings like "If Ever There Was" and "A City Below" get the indoors and the outdoors of Italy into an easy companionship, with results that will please anyone who gets restless at this time of the year.

By JOHN RUSSELL
